PROFILE

A passionate and driven college student majoring in Human Sciences at Osaka University, I currently explore the intersection of policy, culture, and advocacy through writing, research, and creative expression. Captivated by the power of words, I seek to understand and illuminate the struggles and triumphs of humanity by analyzing social movements, engaging in thoughtful discussions, and exploring the forces that shape society. With a deep appreciation for the narratives that shape history and the policies that influence lives, I aspire to challenge perspectives and contribute to the conversations that drive meaningful change—walking a fine line between Icarus's ambition and Ascanius's legacy.

Public speaking Creative writing English literature Comparative Historical Analysis Critical thinking

Adaptability Interpersonal communication

HOBBIES AND INTERESTS

Model United Nations

Engaging in Model United Nations has honed my skills in diplomacy, public speaking, and critical thinking, allowing me to analyze global issues and articulate persuasive arguments. Simulating a countries and individuals in Model United Nations opened my eyes to the harsh realities of our world, exposing me to the complexities of conflict and brutality in a way that was truly eye-opening.

Poetry

Poetry not only serves as my creative outlet but it has also sharpened my ability to convey complex emotions and ideas with clarity and impact. I often write not only about emotional turmoil but also about the realities of conflict and war, attempting to move hearts and minds in a way that cannot be done with just simple words.

Theater

My experience in theater has strengthened my adaptability, confidence, and communication. I also casually write screenplays which contain certain political elements and historical reference

Football

Football has instilled discipline, resilience, and leadership. As a goalkeeper it is not just my duty to guide my team, but it is also to communicate effectively. Football has taught me the true meaning of Japanese proverb "fall down seven times, stand up eight."

History

I am deeply interested in the historical forces that have shaped the world we live in today, particularly war and conflict. I explore parallels between past and present, such as the Israel-Palestine conflict and the Greco-Ethiopian War, or the evolution of Japan's Tokkō (Special Attack Units) and its militaristic state, examining how the status of the emperor and society has transformed over time.
