ACADEMIC PROJECTS

Research Paper:

1. “Why women aren’t allowed in temples during periods: A human rights perspective ”

- Examined religious and cultural justifications for menstrual taboos in India through feminist and human rights frameworks.
- Analyzed how temple entry restrictions violate constitutional rights and global gender equality norms.
- Engaged with legal case (e.g., Sabarimala) to frame the issue as systemic gender discrimination.

2.“The rise and the evolution of party system in Haryana: From Congress dominance to BJP”

- Analyzed the political transformation of Haryana through historical, socio-economic, and caste-based lenses.
- Traced the decline of Congress hegemony and the emergence of regional and national parties using electoral data and political theory.
- Examined key shifts in voter behavior, coalition politics, and the role of identity and leadership in shaping party dynamics.

3. Mao zedong’s revolution (1966-1976) and it strategic role in Cold War dynamics”

- Analyzed the Cultural Revolution as both a domestic ideological campaign and a strategic maneuver within Cold War geopolitics.
- Explored how Mao leveraged anti-Soviet rhetoric, Third World alliances, and revolutionary diplomacy to reposition China globally.
- Assessed the Revolution’s impact on China–USSR relations, Sino-American rapprochement, and global communist movements.

Group Project:

United stand: University initiative against drugs and their influence on student

- Investigated the prevalence, causes, and consequences of drug use among university students through surveys and secondary research.
