

Statement of purpose

Dear CRY's internship team, Values and ethics, are something that I have been drawn to, from the very first day of my law school, that I happen to carry with me now daily: law is not just power in theory, but also power in service. As a first year B.A., LL.B (Hons.) student, I may be early in my legal journey, but I am already deeply committed to building a career grounded in public service and right based advocacy. I am writing to apply for an internship with CRY, not simply to observe – but also contribute meaningfully, even at this early stage. I hold myself to righteous academic and personal standards.

My interest in law has never been limited to the classroom. I believe that legal education without social exposure is incomplete.

Right to Education, Protection from abuse, Freedom from exploitation all central to CRY's mission – are not just constitutional promises but human essentials for living. I wish to understand how these are implemented (or not) on the ground and more importantly how law can effectively bridge this gap.

What sets me apart is not just my diligence but also my ability to reflect deeply and act with purpose.

I am drawn to CRY because it is at the intersection of law, humanity and change – a triad I hope to anchor my future in.

I am eager to assist in legal research – documentation and awareness-based initiatives and community work in Hyderabad. I am open to guidance, challenges.

Thank you for considering my application. I hope to learn from CRY's work and give my best.

Warm regards,

Sonika Naga Dhanyavi
