Communication Expert*

About me

As a digital marketer and communicator pursuing an M.A. in Clinical Psychology from IGNOU, I aim to combine creative strategy with psychological insight to make mental health more accessible, empathetic, and engaging. With a background in storytelling, mentoring, and social impact communication, I seek to contribute to spaces that empower individuals, particularly through awareness, counselling, and emotional wellbeing initiatives.

I bring to the table a strong understanding of human behaviour from both marketing and psychological perspectives, along with a genuine commitment to applying these insights in community, NGO, and educational settings that prioritise growth, understanding, and care.

Academic Research & Projects

Title: The Impact of Workload on Mental Health and Psychological Well-being Among Professionals in Early Adulthood (Aged 20–40) Working in MNCs or the Corporate Sector

- Designed and conducted a quantitative study examining how workload influences psychological wellbeing and mental health outcomes among early-career corporate professionals in India.
- Collected and analysed data using Jamovi statistical software, applying descriptive and inferential techniques (e.g., correlation and t-test analysis).
- Managed the entire research process independently — from literature review and data collection to analysis, interpretation, and report writing.
