

CRY (Child Rights and You) – Internship Report

-Zahidul Hoda

During my internship with CRY (Child Rights and You), I had the opportunity to engage closely with one of India's leading NGOs working for the rights and holistic development of children. The experience provided me with valuable insights into the functioning of the development sector, particularly in areas concerning education, health, protection, and child participation.

My primary role involved data analysis and research-based work. I analyzed data sets related to CRY's initiatives and programs, helping identify trends, measure impact, and derive insights that could support better planning and reporting. This process strengthened my analytical and critical thinking abilities while deepening my understanding of the practical application of data in social sector decision-making.

In addition, I prepared structured presentations and reports on key thematic areas including Child Safeguarding Policy, Child Rights, Child Marriage, Right to Education, Early Childhood Care (ICDS), Child Labour, and the Juvenile Justice System. These tasks enhanced my knowledge of legal frameworks and policies related to children's welfare, while also refining my research and communication skills.

Overall, this internship was an enriching experience that helped me appreciate the intersection of data-driven analysis and social impact. Working with CRY allowed me to contribute meaningfully to its mission of ensuring happy, healthy, and creative childhoods for all children.
