

Srishti Manipal Institute of Art, Design & Technology

(Offers diverse undergraduate and postgraduate programs in areas like Graphic Arts, Digital Media Production, User Interface Design, and Design-Led Innovation)

Idea 1

Develop storytelling and visual arts modules to enhance creativity and self-expression among children.

Idea 2

Train children in basic visual storytelling, photography, and audio recording.

Srishti students guide, and organise photo essays, short films, or podcasts created by community members themselves.

Publish the outcomes on a CRY website or use them for fundraising, awareness, and policy advocacy.

Idea 3

Stories on themes like gender equality, school dropout, child labor, and dreams. CRY can use these podcasts for advocacy, awareness campaigns, and donor engagement.

Idea 4

Awareness Campaigns & Communication Design - Student Projects & Collaborations: Students can create impactful visual campaigns (posters, films, social media content) to spread awareness about CRY's initiatives.

Idea 5

Service Design & Social Innovation: Through service design, students can prototype innovative ways for CRY to reach marginalized communities more effectively.

Idea 6

Workshops & Seminars: Hosting talks by CRY at Srishti to foster student engagement in social change.

Idea 7

Child Rights Art Exhibitions: Hosting exhibitions that express child rights issues through student artwork.

Asian Institute of Design

(Focuses on Game Art, Animation, Product Design, UI/UX, and emerging technologies like AI & ML)

Idea 1

Create gamified learning experiences focusing on basic education and life skills.

Idea 2

Develop engaging digital content and animations to make learning more accessible and fun.

Idea 3

Organise workshops where children can create digital art, fostering digital creativity.

Idea 4

Short Animated Films: Students can create powerful animated narratives or explainer videos to depict CRY's work, child rights violations, or success stories.

Idea 5

Serious Games on Child Rights: Developing interactive games that educate children, teachers, or parents about child labor, education rights, and protection issues.

Idea 6

Impactful PSAs: Using VFX to create visually striking films that dramatize the challenges faced by children in India.

Ideas for Initiatives under CRY for the Indian Institute of Journalism and New Media and NITTE Institute of Communication:

Please note, since both institutions deal with media and communication the ideas listed below are applicable for both.

Idea 1: Documentaries.

- Students can use their filmmaking, editing, script writing and visual storytelling skills to spotlight children's issues such as child labor and advocate for issues such as education for the girl child.
- They can obtain material from CRY's field sites and showcase them on CRY's platforms. Additionally it would benefit them by adding to their resumes.

Idea 2: Photojournalism + Magazine.

- On visiting NITTE's website, I noticed that while they only offer one degree program they do have an affinity for workshops.
- Students could set up a photojournalism workshop or alternatively help curate and publish a magazine that highlights children's issues and their narratives.

Idea 3: Social Media.

- Students can help boost CRY's outreach by applying their creative skills to make engaging instagram posts and posters.
- They can help create communication kits like flyers and brochures used in CRY's advocacy with schools and potential volunteers.

Idea 4: Campaign Design.

- CRY can conduct 24 or 48 hour campaign ideation sprints where students design slogans, branding and content calendars for CRY's upcoming drives.
