DAY 1(27TH MAY)

- In the morning I taught students ages 5 to 10 years English in interactive ways so that they are easily able to learn.
- The NGO celebrated “International Missing Children’s Day” so I helped them prepare a set up(put up posters as well as standees).
- The chief Guest Invited was Sub Inspector as well as head constable of the local Police Station. Ms. Reena Banerjee(the CEO of Nav Srishti was also present)
- Parents and children were invited to make them aware of the situation and tell them how to proceed in case of a missing child.
- After the event, I prepared a detailed report of the whole event to send to the superiors as well as potentially post on social media.

DAY 2(28TH MAY)

- I taught Mathematics to Students of ages 5-13 years in 2 batches.
- The first batch was of students was from 5 to 9 years, I found that it was quite difficult to direct the attention of these kids towards me so I started teaching them by grabbing their attention using simple games such as counting the number of circular objects they can find in their surroundings.
- The second batch was equally Challenging since they were adamant about not learning new things so I started to tell them my personal challenges as a child with certain subjects and how I overcame them.

DAY 3(29TH MAY)- Work from Home

- I wasn't able to go to the NGO since I had to get my passport reissued and my appointment was clashing with the timings of the NGO.
- I Worked from home by giving ideas to other mentors in the Ngo to play fun interactive games where the children also learn something new.
- I got to know that the following day,the NGO would be celebrating “Menstruation Hygiene Day” so I planned a few things that could be done the next day.

DAY 4(30TH MAY)

- Since it was Friday which is a “Funday” in Nav Srishti students are not taught any particular subject rather they are allowed to be free, dance, sing, recite poems or even stories.
- After that I helped to set up the “Menstrual Hygiene Camp” and invited students 12 years and upward.
- The Staff of Nav Srishti taught these students about the process of Menstruation and how it affects the female body.
- The Girls were then asked to draw something that is reminiscent of Menstruation to them.
- The session was well Executed and ended with girls sharing their personal encounter with Menstruation and how they maintain their hygiene during that time.

DAY 5(2nd June)

- On Monday I taught Hindi to student of ages 5 to 13 years.
- I noticed that even though the students were fluent in speaking Hindi, they weren't able to read at all. Their Basics were not clear so I taught them from the very basic.
- Many students were planning to go back to their hometown/village for a while so this was one of our last interactions, as a Thank you gesture they gave me a sticker of a cartoon as well as a flower.

KEY LEARNINGS AND TAKEAWAYS:-

DAY 1

• LEARNINGS:-

-Interactive Teaching Methods: Young learners are always better with interactive activities. This helps building understanding and retention of the new concept in learning.

-Community Event Coordination: Being involved in the organization of local events and community engagement helps to promote a rely sense of responsibility and teamwork.

-Engagement with Community: A collaboration with authorities and community members enhances the impact and benefits of further awareness campaigns.

• TAKEAWAYS:-

-By adding in interactive methods and activities into lessons it helps to engage learners significantly.

-Growth and the coordination of community events are essential and successful if implemented through clear communication and relationships with others.

-Diversifying the different approaches will facilitate better learning outcomes.

-Relate to students in a personal way when I shared my own experience this can create a connection and motivate students.

-Maintain Attention: Manage classroom behaviors, student engagement and focused attention for each space in learning is important for the learner and effective for the teacher too.

• TAKEAWAYS:-

-Having a flexible approach to teaching will assist programming individual needs.

-Consistent consequential management strategies contribute to a productive learning environment.

DAY 3

• LEARNINGS:-

-Remote Mentoring: In my absence, I was able to mentor other mentors by guiding them on how to create interactive games that were fun and incorporated some learning, which shows that I was flexible and adaptable.

-Event Planning: I think my way of planning for the "Menstruation Hygiene Day" was evidence of my organization skill.

• TAKEWAYS:-

- Remote engagement is not less impactful than in-person engagement if communication is done clearly and in a timely manner.
- If planned for the future, task can be performed positively.

DAY 4

• LEARNINGS:-

- Health Education :-It was enlightening to be present for the "Menstrual Hygiene Camp". I think it is vital for adolescent girls to receive education about menstrual health education programmes, given that it is an often-stigmatized and a taboo topic.
- It was powerful to be able to support student's drawing representations of menstruation. It allowed students to express their thinking and feelings about menstruation, which helped foster an environment of emotional support.

• TAKEAWAYS:

- Discussion and teaching of menstrual hygiene in a safe space allows girls to leave feeling empowered and it can promote dignity and self-respect.
- Projects and creative expression, like drawing, can assist in desensitizing topics and can promote open dialogue.

DAY 5

• LEARNINGS:-

- Finding Learning Gaps: Discovering that while students could talk fluently in Hindi, they could not read it stressed the importance of diagnosing and recognizing the gaps in their learning.
- Revising the basics of reading ensured that every student could start from a point of strong understanding.

• TAKEAWAYS:-

- Assessing students skills in a comprehensive way allows to teach specifically for each student's skills development.
- A small gesture of appreciation like students gifting me a sticker and flower is a testament to how I've influenced their meeting and the great relationship I've built with them.
