Problem identification:

Background: There are 382 families in Campbelpeta village. All the people here are (BC-a) Agni Kula Kshatriya kings. They have to go 7 kilometers away from the village to study high school. Parents are afraid of their girls' safety to study higher education. They cannot send them in autos. The village does not have RTC facilities. Due to these reasons, due to the lack of security after completing 9th class, parents are reluctant to send their girls out for higher education.

In 2023, after Ch. Lilly completed 9th grade, we met her parents to explain the importance of girls' education. Lilly was admitted to a high school in Gilakaladindi. Every month, we organize children's collective meetings for the children and create awareness about education and child marriage. It was learned through the children's collectives that Lilly had stopped studying and was staying at home. Her parents had to drop their daughter out of school, their elder daughter had a love marriage, and the village had no transport facilities, so they were concerned about the safety of the girls, so they dropped her out of school and kept her at home.

Project Interventions

Tracking of children vulnerable or high-risk with Child Rights

The project team is identifying dropout children and preparing a list of children at risk of entering into situations of child rights violation. This helps in tracking these children on a monthly basis. Ch. Lilly, located in Campbelpet village within the project area, has been identified as a dropout. Hence, the project team is tracking children, especially high-risk cases like Lilly.

Home visits and counselling by the project team involving community stake holders

The team, consisting of CBO & PRI, teachers, secretariat and Anganwadi teachers, visited Lilly's family and counselled her parents about the importance of the girl child and the negative impact of child marriage on the girls' education. The teachers, CBO&PRI project staff explained the benefits of sending their daughter to school and convinced the parents about the impact of dropping out of school on girls.

Vigilance by child collective members

The project and local stakeholders' efforts to raise awareness about girl child education among Lily's family

The project team and local stakeholders actively engaged with Lily's family to raise awareness about the importance of girls' education. They conducted regular children's collective meetings to spread awareness on education and child marriage. After Lily completed 9th grade, the team personally met her parents and counseled them, which led to her admission into a high school in Gilakaladindi.

Project saved Lily from dropping out and helped her join the 10th grade, pass the 10th, and get admitted to college. ng by the project team involving community stake holders

Through consistent counseling and follow-ups, the project team, along with community stakeholders, convinced Lily's parents to let her continue her education. She was re-admitted into 10th grade, successfully completed her exams, and went on to join college. This intervention not only prevented her dropout but also empowered her to pursue higher education.

Facilitating Re-enrolment and Continuous Education Support

After identifying Lily as a dropout through child collective vigilance, the project team facilitated her re-enrolment by counseling her parents on the importance of continued education. They addressed safety concerns and ensured she got admitted to a high school in Gilakaladindi. The team continues to monitor her progress through regular follow-ups.

Impact: Project tracking and community-level monitoring helped Ch Lily avoid dropout and overcome obstacles to achieve her career goals. She became a role model for her fellow girls in the village.
